Continuation of 11. does NOT place the application in condition for allowance because: Applicant's arguments are not persuasive. Applicant asserts that Carlisle does not show receiving an instrument identifier identifying the instrument. The examiner does not concur. It is clear in the rejection that the Carlisle smart card is the instrument and that the smart card has an ID file which is received when the smart card is put into a smart card reader.

Applicant asserts that the combination of references does not show the generation of account information at a host. Generating "information" in a computer system is very broad and, under the guidance of the KSR case, common sense in conjunction with the cited prior at teaches this broad ilmatiation.

Applicant asserts that the prior art does not show stored value accounts and credit accounts linked to the instrument. Carislies shows, column 21, lines 50-56, "Although the accounts described in the above example involved welfare programs, other types of accounts may be outlined for Account "A", Account "B", etc., such as conventional Visa, MasterCard, Discover, or other credit tard accounts, as well as savings and/or checking accounts obtained through banks, savings & loans, credit unions, or the like."
